Clinical Assistant Professor
Department of Counseling and Educational Development
UNC Greensboro

Faculty in the Department of Counseling and Educational Development (CED) in the School of Education at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro (UNCG) seek a Clinical Assistant Professor for a colleague. We are searching for a team-oriented individual who will contribute their own experience and expertise, and we welcome applicants from diverse backgrounds. This position is open to applicants regardless of counseling track identity, as there are opportunities to be involved in new and existing department initiatives within each track.

The position is primarily focused on teaching courses and providing supervision at the master's and doctoral level, and also includes opportunities for coordination and outreach activities, program development, advising graduate students who are from diverse racial, socioeconomic, and cultural backgrounds, and providing departmental, school, and university service. This is a 9-month full-time position beginning August 1, 2020.

The Department offers programs in three tracks: Clinical Mental Health Counseling, School Counseling, and Couple and Family Counseling at the master's level and a Ph.D. in Counseling and Counselor Education; all are accredited by CACREP. This position requires a doctoral degree, preferably in Counselor Education from a CACREP accredited program. Applicants should have, or be eligible for, relevant counselor credentials (e.g., LPC, NCC, school counselor license) in North Carolina. Areas of interest include, but are not limited to, topics related to crisis and trauma, the application of neuroscience to counseling, evidenced based practices, program evaluation, assessment, addictions, couple and family counseling, and career counseling. Members of diverse populations are strongly encouraged to apply.

Review of candidates will begin October 30, 2019, and will continue until the position is filled. Applicants should submit a letter of interest (clearly identifying the position they are applying for) along with a curriculum vita; names and contact information for three references; a brief statement regarding training, experience, and commitment to diversity; and a brief statement describing teaching and supervision backgrounds and approaches. Please see <https://hrs.uncg.edu> for information on benefits. UNCG is an EOE/AA/M/F/D/V employer and is strongly committed to achieving excellence through faculty diversity. The University actively encourages applications and/or nomination of persons of color, persons with Latinx background, persons with diverse backgrounds, and persons with disabilities. Position # 004653.
