

Tenure-Track Assistant Professor of School Counseling
University of Redlands
School of Education

The University of Redlands' Department of Counseling and Human Services seeks applications for a tenure-track assistant professor position. The successful applicant will teach courses primarily in our school counseling program along with some courses in our clinical mental health program. The successful applicant will also supervise and coordinate fieldwork experiences in school counseling. In addition, all School of Education faculty have teaching or advisement responsibilities in our educational leadership doctoral program and will be expected of the successful applicant.

Required Qualifications:

- Earned doctorate in counseling or counseling education with an emphasis in school counseling or a closely related field
- Demonstrated success working with diverse populations
- Competence in clinical supervision attained through formal coursework
- Strong professional commitment to the preparation of professional school counselors
- Commitment to the use of educational technology
- Demonstrated effective interpersonal skills
- Evidence of commitment to an active research agenda

Desirable Qualifications:

- Graduation from a CACREP-accredited doctoral program
- Eligibility for credentialing as a school counselor in California
- Successful teaching experience at the graduate level
- Involvement in state, regional, or national counseling associations

The University of Redlands, a private nondenominational liberal arts university in southern California, is one of the leading private liberal arts universities for the South West region. The School of Education prepares counselors and educators who are committed to social justice and who are prepared for effective practice in increasingly complex educational and clinical contexts.

The Department of Counseling and Human Services offers master's degrees in school counseling, clinical mental health counseling, and human services. We also offer Pupil Personnel Services credentialing. Departmental faculty include both experienced practitioners as well as nationally prominent scholars and leaders in both counseling and psychology training.

We seek a colleague who demonstrates, and will foster in students, a pluralistic notion of values as well as one who challenges assumptions and stereotypes. The University of Redlands is an Equal Opportunity/Equal Access Employer and actively encourages applications from minority and other members of underrepresented groups. The University of Redlands does not discriminate on the basis of race, color, national origin, gender, gender identity, gender expression, genetic information, disability, age, marital status, or sexual orientation in its programs and activities.

This nine-month, full-time position begins September 2020.

Submission reviews will begin November 1st.

TO APPLY: Provide (a) a CV, (b) an unofficial transcript, (c) a cover letter that responds to the position criteria, (d) a brief statement of teaching philosophy, (e) a brief statement of research philosophy, and (f) three letters of recommendation. Application materials should include a list of courses or subjects you have taught, evidence of successful teaching, experiences with diverse populations, and a demonstrated commitment to social justice and teaching culturally responsive counseling. Digital application materials should be sent to Maria Williams, at SOE\_Employment@redlands.edu. Please indicate the specific position you are applying for in your email. Mailed applications should be addressed to Department of Counseling and Human Services Search Committee c/o Maria Williams, University of Redlands, 1200 E. Colton Ave, Redlands, CA 92373.